

FORT GANSEVOORT

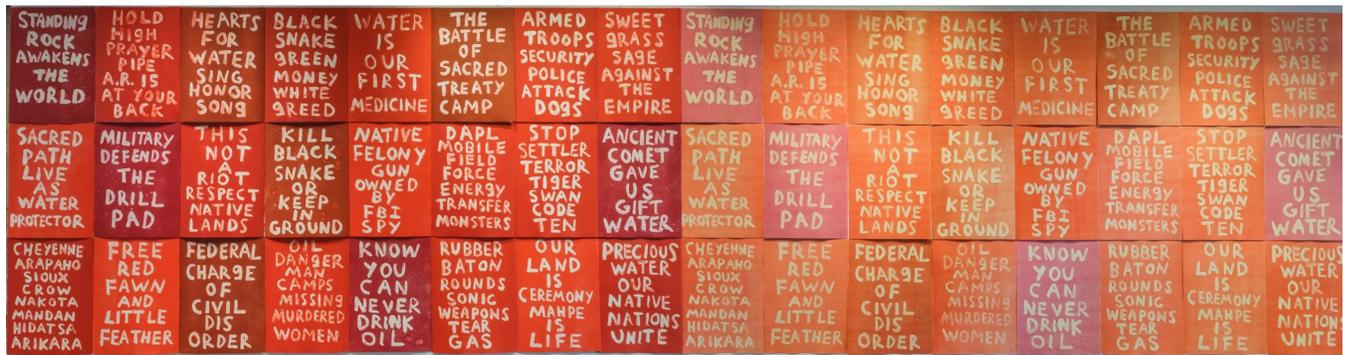

whitewall

Andy Warhol, Michael Rakowitz and More Must-See New York Shows

By Pearl Fontaine

January 9, 2020

Need an escape from the winter blues? Visit some of these top shows in New York City, on view at galleries like Jane Lombard, Jack Shainman, and Fort Gansevoort.

Hock E Aye Vi Edgar Heap of Birds

Standing Rock Awakens the World

2019

90 x 176 in and 90 x 176 in

24 primary mono prints and 24 ghost prints on paper

Courtesy of the artist and Fort Gansevoort, New York.

Need an escape from the winter blues? Visit some of these top shows in New York City, on view at galleries like Jane Lombard, Jack Shainman, and Fort Gansevoort.

Hock E Aye Vi Edgar Heap of Birds: Standing Rock Awakens the World

Fort Gansevoort

January 11—February 22

Confronting his viewers with the history of the land on which they are standing, Hock E Aye Vi Edgar Heap of Birds' exhibition "Standing Rock Awakens the World" highlights the relationship between the body, land, and ownership, and asserts Native American jurisdiction. Questioning humanity as a whole are works like a monoprint and ghost print series comprised of phrases like "WATER IS OUR FIRST MEDICINE" and "BLACK SNAKE GREEN MONEY WHITE GREED," offering a thought-provoking narrative that brings to the forefront topics like the importance of acknowledging and respecting Indigenous nations, the idea of time as a non-linear entity, and the artist's personal relationship with the earth.